C. Webb Crockett receives Jesse A. Udall Distinguished Service Award

Phoenix, Ariz., May 8, 2009 — Fennemore Craig attorney C. Webb Crockett has been given the Jesse A. Udall Distinguished Service Award in recognition of his skill as a lawyer and commitment to community service.

“Webb Crockett is a great and busy lawyer and a busy family man, who is not too busy to give back to the community. He truly has a distinguished background in the law and in community service and embodies the spirit of the award,” said Don Fletcher, chairman of the Phoenix chapter of the J. Reuben Clark Law Society.

Crockett has been practicing law with Fennemore Craig since 1963. He practices in the areas of utilities regulation, administrative law, legislation and environmental law. He is on the board of directors of Southwest Airlines Co., Arizona Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and East Valley Partnership. He is a member of the LDS Foundation Professional Advisory Council. He is listed in 2009 Best Lawyers in America® in the Energy Law category.

The award is named after Jesse A. Udall, a member of Arizona’s legislature from 1931-38, an Arizona Superior Court judge from 1960-72, and chief justice of the Arizona Supreme Court in 1964 and 1969. He was a World War I and World War II veteran and served as a bishop, stake president and missionary for the Mormon Church.

The J. Reuben Clark Law Society is named after a Mormon lawyer who served as an ambassador to Mexico and a counselor to Heber J. Grant, a president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.
