Two Fennemore Craig attorneys elected to State Bar section chair positions Two others tapped for leadership posts

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 27, 2008 — Two Fennemore Craig attorneys in Phoenix recently were elected to section chair positions within the State Bar of Arizona. Paul Krulisky was elected chair of the Securities Regulation Section and Susan Stone Rosenfield was elected chair of the Intellectual Property Law Section. In addition, two other Phoenix Fennemore Craig attorneys were elected to leadership posts in the State Bar.

Krulisky practices in the areas of corporate and securities law. He has experience in the mergers and acquisitions area, representing buyers and sellers in asset and stock-based transactions and other business acquisitions and reorganizations.

Rosenfield is a registered patent attorney whose practice focuses on all aspects of intellectual property in the life sciences area, including the adoption, defense, and enforcement of copyright, patent, trademark and trade secret rights.

Timothy Burke has been elected as a Member at Large of the Antitrust Law Section Executive Council. Burke practices primarily in the areas of antitrust, business torts, litigation and professional responsibility, including discipline and malpractice defense.

Christa Torralba was elected Member at Large of the Mental Health and Elder Law Section Executive Council. Torralba practices primarily in the areas of health care law, professional liability and civil litigation. She also practices in the area of employment litigation.
