Fennemore Craig Attorney Elected to the Denver Bar Association's Board of Trustees

DENVER, CO – Fennemore Craig, a leading Mountain West law firm, announced Josh Berry, an attorney in the firm's Denver office, has been nominated to the Denver Bar Association's Board of Trustees to serve a second term.

"Our lawyers are encouraged to serve and lead local, state and national bar organizations," said Troy Rackham, managing partner of Fennemore Craig's Denver office. "Josh's election to a second term reflects the depth of his knowledge and the high regard in which he is held by his peers; we are proud to congratulate him on this honor."

Berry focuses his practice on business and healthcare litigation. He has been listed as a Colorado Super Lawyers Rising Star since 2015. Berry earned his J.D. from the University of Kansas School of Law and his B.A. from Knox College.

The Denver Bar Association is a highly engaging local organization committed to the goal of helping lawyers practice law. They interact with law professionals on a myriad of levels, from face-to-face networking and career-building CLE to providing rewarding opportunities for leadership and community involvement. The membership base includes all facets of the practice of law, including students and young lawyers, those in private and government practice, judges and highly revered law professionals.
