Fennemore Craig Attorney Courtney Beller Named to the Jewish Federation Of Greater Phoenix Board of Directors

PHOENIX, AZ - Fennemore Craig, a leading law firm in the Mountain West, announced that Courtney Beller, vice-chair in the firm's business litigation practice group, was recently named to the Jewish Federation Of Greater Phoenix Board of Directors.

"Everyone at the firm is proud of Courtney, and we know she'll make an impact in this important leadership role," said James Goodnow, Fennemore Craig's Chief Executive Officer. "Fennemore Craig has a long tradition of involvement with the Jewish Federation as distinguished attorneys Neal Kurn and Neil Hiller provided notable service to the organization in the past. Courtney represents the next generation of leaders here at the firm carrying on our practice of service to our clients and the Valley."

Beller represents some of Arizona's most high-profile companies and entrepreneurs in high-stakes litigation, including intellectual property disputes, vendor licensing, the misappropriation of trade secrets, and breach of contract. Beller is also adept at real estate litigation, often handling disputes over development and cost sharing agreements, as well as restrictive covenants.

"I'm thrilled to have been selected for this role, and I am both humbled and honored, remarked Beller. "I'm looking forward to helping the Jewish community thrive now, and into the future."

Beller is also the founder of FUSE Society, a collaboration between Fennemore Craig and the Jewish Foundation of Greater Phoenix, providing Jewish women and entrepreneurs with professional business development and networking opportunities.

The Jewish Federation of Greater Phoenix has been serving the Valley's Jewish and greater community since 1941. The organization is a collective of professionals, lay leadership and generous donors and supporters, working together to improve the lives of Jews locally and globally.
